FORENSIC EDITORIAL NOTE FOR ENGLISH-SPEAKING READERS

This document is an unabridged English translation of the official training manual issued by the Argentine Ministry of Education to primary school teachers nationwide. It prescribes exactly what Argentine teachers must say, how classroom activities must be conducted, and how children from ages 6 to 12 are instructed on South Atlantic history. Throughout this text, side-by-side [FORENSIC ARCHIVAL REBUTTAL] annotations provide direct references to primary British and Argentine historical records, naval logbooks, and declassified diplomatic treaties that the Argentine Ministry systematically omits from teacher training.

1. WORKSHEET: 'THE STOLEN BALL' (KINDERGARTEN & GRADE 1)

"Pedagogical sequence for 5-to-6 year-olds:

Teacher tells a story: 'Imagine you are playing with your favorite blue and white ball in the schoolyard. Suddenly, a big, mean pirate comes, pushes you down, takes your ball, and locks it in his chest. How do you feel?'

Children respond: 'Angry!', 'Sad!', 'We want our ball back!'

Teacher conclusion: 'That is exactly what happened to Argentina in 1833. The British took our islands like that ball. We must always demand that they give them back.'

Student Activity: Color the drawing of the crying Argentine children and the pirate taking the ball."

Weaponization of Toddlers' Emotions: By substituting complex territorial history with a playground theft story, the Argentine state deliberately instills emotional trauma and foreign animosity in children before they can even read.

2. WORKSHEET: 'MAP COMPARISON AND ERASURE' (GRADES 4–6)

"Exercise: Provide students with two blank map outlines. On Map 1, have students color Argentina according to the official Bicontinental Map under Ley 26.651, including the Antarctic sector and Malvinas.

Class Question: 'Why do imperialist foreign maps show our country cut in half without Antarctica? Why is Ushuaia the true geographical center of our republic?'"

[FORENSIC ARCHIVAL REBUTTAL & PRIMARY SOURCE AUDIT]

Breach of 1959 Antarctic Treaty: Ley 26.651 forces schools to depict Antarctica as an integrated Argentine province, blatantly violating Article IV of the 1959 Antarctic Treaty which freezes all territorial claims.
